Guided Mold Recovery

The leak is fixed. So why don't you feel fixed?

Mold in a home, office or car can leave you feeling off long after you've moved out or cleaned up. Most online mold detoxes push you too hard, too fast. We start with your environment and your labs, then walk you through a phased plan that moves at the pace your body can handle.

[Book a Discovery Call]

Does this sound like you?

- You've been tired and foggy ever since a leak, a flood or a move.
- Headaches or stuffiness ease when you're away from home and come back when you return.
- Damp days or certain buildings make you feel worse.
- Smells, fragrances and chemicals bother you more than they used to.
- You tried a detox on your own and felt worse instead of better.

If this sounds familiar, the next step is a conversation. We don't diagnose, and we work alongside your doctor. What we do is help you get out of exposure and give your body's own detox and gut systems the support they need to recover.

Step one: stop the exposure

No supplement can out-detox a moldy building, so every client starts here, before any product. We give you a clear checklist: a certified inspection (not a hardware-store kit), fixing the water source, professional remediation when it's needed, humidity control and air filtration. If you can't fix the source yet, we plan around that together.

Labs that show where you stand

Guessing is how people end up on the wrong detox. Through our in-house, nationwide medical network, we can order and review any blood or genetic lab panel you need, wherever you live. For mold, that usually starts with a mycotoxin panel, the test most often used to check whether mold toxins are present in your body. From there, we add any blood work or genetic testing that helps us understand how well your body handles detox, then retest so you can see your progress.

How it works: four phases, about four months

Weeks 1–2 · Open the exits. Your body clears toxins mainly through the bowels, so we make sure digestion, hydration and protein intake are working before anything gets stirred up.

Weeks 3–10 · Bind and clear. We add support one piece at a time, a few days apart, to catch toxins in the gut before they're reabsorbed and to support your liver as it processes them.

Weeks 6–18 · Restore the gut. Mold exposure often goes hand in hand with an unbalanced gut. This phase focuses on clearing unwanted microbes and rebuilding a healthy lining and good bacteria.

Week 18 onward · Rebuild and maintain. Once you've settled, we taper to a small daily routine and give you a plan for staying protected, including what to do if you're ever exposed again.

What's included

- A full intake that reviews your history, symptoms, exposure and every medication and supplement you take.
- An exposure checklist for your home, car and workplace, with guidance on finding a certified inspector.
- Lab testing ordered and reviewed for you, including a mycotoxin panel and any blood or genetic panels you need, through our in-house, nationwide medical network, with retesting to track progress.
- One-on-one coaching with check-ins at the start and at every phase change, plus support between calls.
- A personalized, paced protocol that adds one thing at a time and adjusts to how you respond.
- Every supplement for the full program, professional-grade and delivered locally.
- A daily schedule, eating plan and detox-reaction plan, so you always know what to take, what to eat and what to do if you feel off.

Why guided beats doing it alone

Mold recovery is where going it alone backfires most. Move toxins faster than your body can clear them and you feel worse, not better. That's why so many people quit. Timing matters too: some products need to be taken hours apart from food and medication, or they don't work as intended. We pace every step, watch how you respond and adjust before a rough patch turns into a setback.

Take it further: Lab-Guided Meal Prep

The right food carries a big share of the load during recovery. Pair your program with chef-prepared, whole-food meals designed around your bloodwork and DNA and aligned with your low-sugar recovery eating plan.

Who it's for

- Anyone who has lived or worked in a water-damaged building and hasn't felt right since
- People who have already fixed their home and want help with the next step
- Anyone who tried a mold detox alone and felt worse
- Clients finishing the Gut Rebuild who know mold was part of their story

FAQ

Do I need to fix my house first? Ideally, yes. Removing the source is the single most important step. If you're still working on it, we'll talk through when it makes sense to start.

Can you test for mold exposure? Yes. We can order a mycotoxin panel, the test most often used to check for mold exposure, along with any blood or genetic panels you need. Everything is ordered and reviewed through our in-house, nationwide medical network, so testing works even if you're not local.

Do I need a diagnosis to join? No. This is lifestyle and nutrition coaching, not medical treatment. We work alongside your doctor, and we'll tell you when something needs medical attention.

Will I feel worse before I feel better? Some people feel mild, temporary symptoms as their body clears things out. Our whole approach is built to keep that manageable: we go slow, add one thing at a time and adjust with you.

How long does it take? The active program runs about four months, followed by a simple maintenance routine.

Do I need to live in Marble Falls? No. We deliver locally to Lakeway, Bee Cave, Spicewood, Marble Falls and Horseshoe Bay, and ship everywhere else.

How is this different from the Gut Rebuild? The Gut Rebuild is a 90-day program focused on digestion and energy. Mold Recovery adds an exposure plan, binder and liver support, and a longer, more carefully paced course.

Before publishing

1. Lab wording. The page now says you can order and review any blood or genetic panel, including a mycotoxin panel, through your in-house, nationwide medical network. Make sure that matches how the network works, for example whether a licensed provider signs off on each order. The footer already says lab work is handled by licensed providers.
2. Inspector guidance. The page promises help finding a certified inspector. If you have a local inspector or remediation company you trust, consider naming them or offering a referral.
3. Check-in schedule. The page says check-ins happen at the start and at every phase change. Adjust if your actual schedule differs.
4. Shipping. As on the Gut Rebuild page, confirm you ship to remote clients, or change that FAQ answer to local delivery only.
5. Wording is careful on purpose. The page avoids claiming to treat "mold toxicity" or any illness, because mainstream medicine doesn't recognize it as an established diagnosis. It also doesn't name BodyHealth products, to protect your protocol and stay within wholesale brand-use rules. Keep both in place if you edit.
